Area of Specialization: Acting theories, both as an area of study and as practical tools.

Current Research: Applying concepts from behavioral neuroscience to Stanislavsky's methodology and theories to give performance scholars a richer and more precise understanding of Stanislavsky's work, while allowing teachers and directors to zero in on the techniques that are most likely to help them achieve their goals. In particular, I am focused on the various ways in which the well-known (but not necessarily often discussed) Stanislavskian concepts of Imagination, Emotion and the Will -- all in service to a Goal-directed Action -- can be very effective streamlined practical guides for the actor.

Areas of Concentration: Euro-American Theatre History before 1800, Euro-American Theatre History after 1800, Euro-American Film History.

Areas of Interest: Directing theory, non-western theatre techniques and theory, the intersections between theatre, film and performance media, Holocaust theatre, refugee theatre, audience response theory, diversity and inclusion, and the use of theatre techniques as therapy for people with dementia and other cognitive difficulties.
